Khorsheda has always worked as a tutor to support her family. Becoming a teacher has always been dream of hers.

“Being a teacher is my dream, and see Allah has blessed me with this gift!”

In 2008, the CLP started an education pilot. Khorsheda applied and was selected to work as a teacher in one of the CLP learning centres. She received training which increased her confidence to teach and share her passion for education.

Khorsheda was dedicated to her students. Knowing that a number of them could not receive the appropriate support from their parents, due to high illiteracy on the chars, she would often help her students with their home work. She also spent time with the parents and encouraged them to support their children.

Khorsheda is extremely proud of her students. In the recent end of year examination, all of them passed, including six who graduated with A+ and twelve with A.

Khorsheda has three children, who are also dedicated to improving education services on the chars. Both of her daughters are teachers, with her eldest one working in a government primary school set up in the chars with Khorsheda’s support.
